Build That Bridge

If you are trying to surround yourself with positive messages, and are looking for music with substance, this CD is for you.

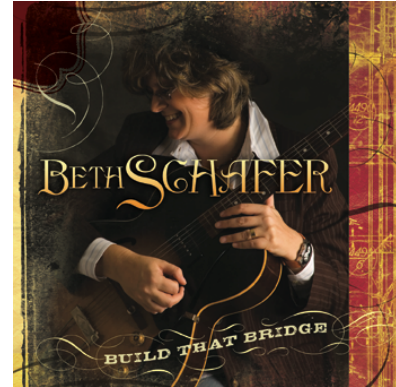

Positive messages that don't preach, rocking arrangements with a contemporary twist and great vocals and guitars define this groundbreaking release, Build That Bridge, by performer, Beth Schafer.

After her 2006 American Idol Underground win in the faith-based category, Schafer set out to do what no performers are currently doing...write music with positive faith-affirming, peace-affirming messages that would appeal to listeners, regardless of their faith affiliation.

With thick layers of vocals, electronica and guitars fronted by Beth's silky voice, the messages of Build That Bridge reach out to those who believe in God and hope for peace; who are willing to stand shoulder to shoulder with others like themselves regardless of what church or temple they pray in.

The title track, co-written and performed by veteran rocker Larry Hoppen of the band, Orleans, is backed by Beth's all-star band as is the rest of this well-arranged, well-produced collection. Schafer has garnered fans of so many diverse faiths, it was time to assemble a project that spoke to her fanbase directly; letting them know that the music that unites them could create friendships that could lead to peace. The overall mood is celebratory and hopeful; making you want to join the cast of thousands who sing along on the two live tracks toward the CD's end.

Build That Bridge is ambitious and fresh. The solid melodies and thick harmonies are memorable, even infectious. Schafer as a player stands apart from the average guitar-slinging folk singer, and as a writer, shatters the one-dimensional rock songs of the modern faith-based repertoire. It is currently available at www.bethschafer.com, cdbaby.com and for download at digstation.com and oysongs.com.
