the life of the mind

Heidelberg's Bryenton Center for the Honors Program invites eligible students to explore the "Life of the Mind." Honors students participate in seminars that represent the program's four intellectual themes: the Scholar, the Scientist, the Artist and the Citizen. To complement these seminars, students take support courses from the natural sciences, humanities, arts and social sciences. The program also offers honors students increased flexibility to complete a second major, a study abroad experience or an internship.

program highlights

- Opportunity to study abroad at Oxford University in England
- Seminars representing the program's four intellectual themes
- Service learning seminar and 40 hours of community engagement
- Senior research project and presentation completed under the guidance of a faculty mentor

program benefits

Honors Center

The Bryenton Center for Honors Program provides a separate, 24-hour access study center, open only to honors students.

Flexibility in Course Selection

Instead of nearly 40 semester hours of general education requirements, honors students complete specialized seminars and 10 self-selected support courses.

Academic Privileges

Honors students receive priority registration privileges. In addition, program graduates wear distinctive academic regalia at commencement and receive an honors diploma, an impressive accomplishment to add to a resume or graduate school application.

Community of Learners

The honors program is a supportive community of motivated students who empower one another in the scholarly pursuit of excellence.

Portfolio Compilation

Throughout honors students' four years at Heidelberg, they compile a portfolio of their accomplishments and credentials. These portfolios demonstrate to future employers and graduate schools that honors students are articulate, adept at problem solving and capable of integrating learning with life and work experiences.
