Sometimes we need to slowdown and take a long look at big things. I have come under that conviction myself in recent days as I have been barraged by the short, sweet, and quick sound-byte. Everything in our culture is rapid, bite-sized and brief. Even the way we communicate with others has taken a hit. Chatting, text messaging, even saying "hello" as we pass each other by is nothing but a brief moment.

That's why we need big things. Large, slow, make you meditate and think about what is being said things. That's why we need big Bible books like Isaiah.

This Fall I am challenging you to take up the big book of Isaiah and read it all, chew on it, devour it, and let God's Word fill you heart as you meditate and think on Him. The Isaiah Project is designed to help you do a couple things. First of all be in the Word regularly. 5 chapters a week equates to one chapter a day for the work week. Not too bad! Secondly it is designed to help you understand a larger portion of Scripture and be encouraged that what God wrote 2,700 years ago is very applicable today! So let me encourage you jump in and be a part of the Project!
