Mr. Ali Shama,

I write this letter in response to your 'letter to file'. In the letter; you state that you peeked through my classroom door window during my 9 th period Anatomy & Physiology class. You state that you observed students walking up the the front of the room and showing me their class work while I recorded grade information. You criticized this and wrote in your letter that you expect "100 percent teaching 100 percent of the time".

Your motto does not consider the realities of teaching in the classroom. Nor did you suggest an alternate method for me to collect the grade information. I find that reviewing students notebooks to be a fair and efficient way to observe and record student progress. Many teachers do the same. I therefore question why you have an objection to it.

As I am at a loss for finding another method for recording student grades; perhaps you can help me. I would like to visit your class; and observe your teaching and grading techniques. May I request to learn from you at some time in the near future?

Sincerely,

Ms. Natalie Williams
