

An Open Letter from The Tomchak Family, on Behalf of Andrew and Max

To the wonderful, thoughtful and caring breast pump people,

I only found out today (this morning when I called) that we could have actually returned the pump yesterday (Sunday). I was under the assumption that rentals and returns were regular business hours/days so the thought never occurred to me that I could come in on Sunday.

So as a result, I have missed my deadline by only a few hours and now technically I should be billed for another month. Maybe, maybe not.

Before you just follow the normal rules and bill us, I would like you to consider that we have twin boys. Why? Because they are sure to make us very poor with all of their diapers, formula, clothing, and so on. And what about education costs? Don't even get me started with that.

So what I'm asking is, can you please wave the second month charge so that I can buy these guys a new pair of shoes?

You don't really want them to be sad, do you?

These feet  still need shoes. Be the one to make my boys happy again.

Your thoughtful consideration is very much appreciated during our time of need.
