

Two cats were trying to divide their stolen cheese into two equal parts. One day, the mean cats stole some cheese from a little mouse. Then, the naughty cats were fighting about who should divide the cheese in half. So, a helpful ape asked the cats if he could divide the cheese for them and they let him do it. But, the two pieces of cheese were not equal so the wise ape nibbled and nibbled to try to make them the same for each cat. Suddenly, the cheese was gone and the apes were whining but the ape said, "It belonged to the mouse!" Finally, the cats learned a lesson: Don't steal and be honest!

Two cats were trying to divide their stolen cheese into two equal parts. One day, the mean cats stole some cheese from a little mouse. Then, the naughty cats were fighting about who should divide the cheese in half. So, a helpful ape asked the cats if he could divide the cheese for them and they let him do it. But, the two pieces of cheese were not equal so the wise ape nibbled and nibbled to try to make them the same for each cat. Suddenly, the cheese was gone and the apes were whining but the ape said, "It belonged to the mouse!" Finally, the cats learned a lesson: Don't steal and be honest!

Two cats were trying to divide their stolen cheese into two equal parts. One day, the mean cats stole some cheese from a little mouse. Then, the naughty cats were fighting about who should divide the cheese in half. So, a helpful ape asked the cats if he could divide the cheese for them and they let him do it. But, the two pieces of cheese were not equal so the wise ape nibbled and nibbled to try to make them the same for each cat. Suddenly, the cheese was gone and the apes were whining but the ape said, "It belonged to the mouse!" Finally, the cats learned a lesson: Don't steal and be honest!

Bear was bragging to Turtle about how great he was. One day, Bear was bragging about being the biggest, strongest, and fastest animal and Turtle decided to teach him a lesson. So, Turtle challenged Bear to a race but Bear kept bragging about being much faster than Turtle. The next day, tricky Turtle told bragging Bear the rules of the race: Bear would run on the bank of the pond and Turtle would swim under the ice. During the race, Turtle and his relatives tricked Bear by popping their heads up really fast so Bear had to stop bragging and try to catch up. Before Bear was halfway around the pond, Turtle had won the race and Bear stopped bragging and ran home to rest. Finally, Turtle taught Bear a lesson: Don't brag or show off. Finally, Turtle taught Bear a lesson: "Don't brag or show off."

Bear was bragging to Turtle about how great he was. One day, Bear was bragging about being the biggest, strongest, and fastest animal and Turtle decided to teach him a lesson. So, Turtle challenged Bear to a race but Bear kept bragging about being much faster than Turtle. The next day, tricky Turtle told bragging Bear the rules of the race: Bear would run on the bank of the pond and Turtle would swim under the ice. During the race, Turtle and his relatives tricked Bear by popping their heads up really fast so Bear had to stop bragging and try to catch up. Before Bear was halfway around the pond, Turtle had won the race and Bear stopped bragging and ran home to rest. Finally, Turtle taught Bear a lesson: Don't brag or show off. Finally, Turtle taught Bear a lesson: "Don't brag or show off."

Bear was bragging to Turtle about how great he was. One day, Bear was bragging about being the biggest, strongest, and fastest animal and Turtle decided to teach him a lesson. So, Turtle challenged Bear to a race but Bear kept bragging about being much faster than Turtle. The next day, tricky Turtle told bragging Bear the rules of the race: Bear would run on the bank of the pond and Turtle would swim under the ice. During the race, Turtle and his relatives tricked Bear by popping their heads up really fast so Bear had to stop bragging and try to catch up. Before Bear was halfway around the pond, Turtle had won the race and Bear stopped bragging and ran home to rest. Finally, Turtle taught Bear a lesson: Don't brag or show off. Finally, Turtle taught Bear a lesson: "Don't brag or show off."

The farmer, his son, and their donkey were traveling to the market to sell some wheat. First, the farmer told his son to ride on the donkey because it was too hot to walk but they met some travelers who said, "Look at that lazy boy!" Next, the farmer's son felt bad so he switched places with his father but another group of travelers said, "Look at that big, strong man riding the donkey while his son walks!" Then, the farmer had an idea – they should both ride the donkey, but some other travelers were complaining about the poor donkey's heavy load. So, the farmer and his son decided to carry the heavy solid matter themselves and walk beside the donkey but a group of children laughed at them. Suddenly, they stopped traveling and the farmer told his son, "We should travel however we please!" Finally, they learned an important lesson: You can't please everyone, so just do what you think is best.

The farmer, his son, and their donkey were traveling to the market to sell some wheat. First, the farmer told his son to ride on the donkey because it was too hot to walk but they met some travelers who said, "Look at that lazy boy!" Next, the farmer's son felt bad so he switched places with his father but another group of travelers said, "Look at that big, strong man riding the donkey while his son walks!" Then, the farmer had an idea – they should both ride the donkey, but some other travelers were complaining about the poor donkey's heavy load. So, the farmer and his son decided to carry the heavy solid matter themselves and walk beside the donkey but a group of children laughed at them. Suddenly, they stopped traveling and the farmer told his son, "We should travel however we please!" Finally, they learned an important lesson: You can't please everyone, so just do what you think is best.

The farmer, his son, and their donkey were traveling to the market to sell some wheat. First, the farmer told his son to ride on the donkey because it was too hot to walk but they met some travelers who said, "Look at that lazy boy!" Next, the farmer's son felt bad so he switched places with his father but another group of travelers said, "Look at that big, strong man riding the donkey while his son walks!" Then, the farmer had an idea – they should both ride the donkey, but some other travelers were complaining about the poor donkey's heavy load. So, the farmer and his son decided to carry the heavy solid matter themselves and walk beside the donkey but a group of children laughed at them. Suddenly, they stopped traveling and the farmer told his son, "We should travel however we please!" Finally, they learned an important lesson: You can't please everyone, so just do what you think is best.

The foolish donkey thought it would be fun to pretend to be a lion. One day, the silly donkey found a lion skin beside a dusty road and he wrapped it around himself to pretend to be a lion. Next, the mean donkey scared some sheep by chasing them and acting like a lion. Then, the tricky donkey saw his master and thought it might be fun to frighten him with the lion costume. But, the smart master saw the donkey's ears and he knew the donkey was just pretending. Suddenly, the donkey's master waved a stick at the fake lion and the donkey dashed away. Finally, the foolish donkey learned a lesson: "Don't pretend to be something you're not, just be yourself."

The foolish donkey thought it would be fun to pretend to be a lion. One day, the silly donkey found a lion skin beside a dusty road and he wrapped it around himself to pretend to be a lion. Next, the mean donkey scared some sheep by chasing them and acting like a lion. Then, the tricky donkey saw his master and thought it might be fun to frighten him with the lion costume. But, the smart master saw the donkey's ears and he knew the donkey was just pretending. Suddenly, the donkey's master waved a stick at the fake lion and the donkey dashed away. Finally, the foolish donkey learned a lesson: "Don't pretend to be something you're not, just be yourself."

The foolish donkey thought it would be fun to pretend to be a lion. One day, the silly donkey found a lion skin beside a dusty road and he wrapped it around himself to pretend to be a lion. Next, the mean donkey scared some sheep by chasing them and acting like a lion. Then, the tricky donkey saw his master and thought it might be fun to frighten him with the lion costume. But, the smart master saw the donkey's ears and he knew the donkey was just pretending. Suddenly, the donkey's master waved a stick at the fake lion and the donkey dashed away. Finally, the foolish donkey learned a lesson: "Don't pretend to be something you're not, just be yourself."

The grasshopper thought he could play all day and not do any work. One sizzling summer day, a playful grasshopper was fiddling, singing, dancing, and hopping while the wise ant worked hard collecting food. Next, the dumb grasshopper laughed and asked the busy ant to come and play but the ant said, "I have too much work to do!" But, the lazy grasshopper did not listen and he hopped away to play while the smart ant kept working. In the fall, the foolish grasshopper was still playing and the hard-working ant was almost ready for winter. When winter came, the shivering grasshopper could not play because he was cold and hungry but the warm ant had food and shelter because he worked hard all year long. Finally, the grasshopper learned a lesson: "Finish your work before you play!"

The grasshopper thought he could play all day and not do any work. One sizzling summer day, a playful grasshopper was fiddling, singing, dancing, and hopping while the wise ant worked hard collecting food. Next, the dumb grasshopper laughed and asked the busy ant to come and play but the ant said, "I have too much work to do!" But, the lazy grasshopper did not listen and he hopped away to play while the smart ant kept working. In the fall, the foolish grasshopper was still playing and the hard-working ant was almost ready for winter. When winter came, the shivering grasshopper could not play because he was cold and hungry but the warm ant had food and shelter because he worked hard all year long. Finally, the grasshopper learned a lesson: "Finish your work before you play!"

The grasshopper thought he could play all day and not do any work. One sizzling summer day, a playful grasshopper was fiddling, singing, dancing, and hopping while the wise ant worked hard collecting food. Next, the dumb grasshopper laughed and asked the busy ant to come and play but the ant said, "I have too much work to do!" But, the lazy grasshopper did not listen and he hopped away to play while the smart ant kept working. In the fall, the foolish grasshopper was still playing and the hard-working ant was almost ready for winter. When winter came, the shivering grasshopper could not play because he was cold and hungry but the warm ant had food and shelter because he worked hard all year long. Finally, the grasshopper learned a lesson: "Finish your work before you play!"

The troop of wild monkeys was trying to get the moon out of the well. First, the monkeys stopped at the well for a cool drink and the leader monkey saw the moon floating in the well. So, the leader told his troop to lower him into the well so he could throw the moon back into the sky. Then, the follower monkeys made a chain to lower their leader down to the moon. After that, the monkey chain got longer and heavier until it almost reached the moon. Suddenly, the branch snapped, the monkeys fell in the water, and the moon disappeared because it was only a reflection. Finally, the monkeys learned a lesson: Don't follow a bad leader.

The troop of wild monkeys was trying to get the moon out of the well. First, the monkeys stopped at the well for a cool drink and the leader monkey saw the moon floating in the well. So, the leader told his troop to lower him into the well so he could throw the moon back into the sky. Then, the follower monkeys made a chain to lower their leader down to the moon. After that, the monkey chain got longer and heavier until it almost reached the moon. Suddenly, the branch snapped, the monkeys fell in the water, and the moon disappeared because it was only a reflection. Finally, the monkeys learned a lesson: Don't follow a bad leader.

The troop of wild monkeys was trying to get the moon out of the well. First, the monkeys stopped at the well for a cool drink and the leader monkey saw the moon floating in the well. So, the leader told his troop to lower him into the well so he could throw the moon back into the sky. Then, the follower monkeys made a chain to lower their leader down to the moon. After that, the monkey chain got longer and heavier until it almost reached the moon. Suddenly, the branch snapped, the monkeys fell in the water, and the moon disappeared because it was only a reflection. Finally, the monkeys learned a lesson: Don't follow a bad leader.

Senor Fox wanted to eat Senora Hen so he tried to trick her. One day, Senora Hen was sitting in a tree and she saw Senor Fox licking his chops and looking hungry and thinking of a way to trick her. Next, Senor Fox tried to trick Senora Hen by asking her to come down and visit, but Senora Hen said, "No, you will eat me!" So, Senor Fox made up a law that all animals should be friends but Senora Hen was uncertain and thought he might be trying to trick her. But, Senora Hen played along with Senor Fox's trick and told him five more friends were on their way. After that, Senor Fox ran away because Senora Hen tricked him by saying there were five hunting dogs coming. Finally, Senora Hen taught Senor Fox a lesson: "If you try to trick others, you might get tricked too!"

Senor Fox wanted to eat Senora Hen so he tried to trick her. One day, Senora Hen was sitting in a tree and she saw Senor Fox licking his chops and looking hungry and thinking of a way to trick her. Next, Senor Fox tried to trick Senora Hen by asking her to come down and visit, but Senora Hen said, "No, you will eat me!" So, Senor Fox made up a law that all animals should be friends but Senora Hen was uncertain and thought he might be trying to trick her. But, Senora Hen played along with Senor Fox's trick and told him five more friends were on their way. After that, Senor Fox ran away because Senora Hen tricked him by saying there were five hunting dogs coming. Finally, Senora Hen taught Senor Fox a lesson: "If you try to trick others, you might get tricked too!"

Senor Fox wanted to eat Senora Hen so he tried to trick her. One day, Senora Hen was sitting in a tree and she saw Senor Fox licking his chops and looking hungry and thinking of a way to trick her. Next, Senor Fox tried to trick Senora Hen by asking her to come down and visit, but Senora Hen said, "No, you will eat me!" So, Senor Fox made up a law that all animals should be friends but Senora Hen was uncertain and thought he might be trying to trick her. But, Senora Hen played along with Senor Fox's trick and told him five more friends were on their way. After that, Senor Fox ran away because Senora Hen tricked him by saying there were five hunting dogs coming. Finally, Senora Hen taught Senor Fox a lesson: "If you try to trick others, you might get tricked too!"

Talking Turtle wanted to leave quiet Haiti to visit busy New York City. One day, Turtle and his bird friends were chattering about going to New York City and Turtle thought it was a great idea. Then, Turtle announced to his other animal friends that the birds were going to New York City. After that, Turtle met Pigeon and they talked, talked, talked about New York City, flying, and Turtle's stumpy legs and Pigeon had a great idea! So, helpful Pigeon held a stick in his beak and Turtle held the other end in his mouth and tried not to talk. Suddenly, foolish Turtle shouted, "BYE BYE!" and he fell into the ocean and the birds kept on flying without him. Finally, Turtle learned a lesson: "Don't talk too much or you might miss something!"

Talking Turtle wanted to leave quiet Haiti to visit busy New York City. One day, Turtle and his bird friends were chattering about going to New York City and Turtle thought it was a great idea. Then, Turtle announced to his other animal friends that the birds were going to New York City. After that, Turtle met Pigeon and they talked, talked, talked about New York City, flying, and Turtle's stumpy legs and Pigeon had a great idea! So, helpful Pigeon held a stick in his beak and Turtle held the other end in his mouth and tried not to talk. Suddenly, foolish Turtle shouted, "BYE BYE!" and he fell into the ocean and the birds kept on flying without him. Finally, Turtle learned a lesson: "Don't talk too much or you might miss something!"

Talking Turtle wanted to leave quiet Haiti to visit busy New York City. One day, Turtle and his bird friends were chattering about going to New York City and Turtle thought it was a great idea. Then, Turtle announced to his other animal friends that the birds were going to New York City. After that, Turtle met Pigeon and they talked, talked, talked about New York City, flying, and Turtle's stumpy legs and Pigeon had a great idea! So, helpful Pigeon held a stick in his beak and Turtle held the other end in his mouth and tried not to talk. Suddenly, foolish Turtle shouted, "BYE BYE!" and he fell into the ocean and the birds kept on flying without him. Finally, Turtle learned a lesson: "Don't talk too much or you might miss something!"